What you should write in your report

Write a few short, personal paragraphs describing the time the participant has spent with you.

Here are two example reports showing the sorts of things to include.

Jim proved to be an enthusiastic and well-motivated volunteer. He successfully completed all the tasks he has taken on, which have developed in responsibility over time.

Jim was popular with the team and customers alike. He has most certainly grown in confidence during his placement and has been a huge asset to the charity. Thank you Jim for your support and commitment and we would love to have you back in the future.

Brilliant effort Jim!

Rosie excelled whilst volunteering as a peer educator. She has a personable nature and was able to talk to the younger kids on their level and really engaged them.

From July 2017 to February 2018 her confidence seemed to grow and she developed her own style of explaining our key messages.

She has been a fantastic ambassador for the charity and we have been delighted to have her on board.

A stand out moment for us was when her talk encouraged a young person to confide in her, Rosie handled it with great maturity and took the appropriate steps to refer the young person. This experience will be great to enhance Rosie's CV or lead on to many different career paths and we hope she continues to stay involved with the charity.

Well done Rosie!
